About the Research Program:

ARA Research and Publication division's China Natural Gas Projects Research Program targets to answer the following basic questions when carrying out business in China's natural gas industry:

What's the major projects in this area (both existing and upcoming)?
Which companies invest and operate these projects?
Who are the current managers of these companies?
Who are influencing and formulating the policy?

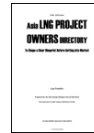

Without a clear and frequently-updated understanding of the above questions, companies make wrong decisions due to wrong judgement. This research program takes thousands of working hours for interviews, people verification, projects updates by a team of experienced seniors. The study leads to a series of natural gas related publications listed as follows:

China Natural Gas Pipeline and LNG Projects Leads Book
